The goal of cosmetic surgery is to improve a person's appearance and, thus, self-esteem by changing the way she or he looks. Cosmetic surgery can be performed on any part of the face and body. Before making an appointment to see a cosmetic surgeon, people should consider their motives for wanting to change how they look. As cosmetic surgery can bring lasting and dramatic changes to the outside appearance, it is important to understand how these changes may affect people on the inside. Many physical characteristics can be successfully changed through cosmetic surgery; others cannot. Good candidates for cosmetic surgery have realistic expectations about what can be accomplished. They understand the medical risks, physical effects during healing, how the surgery will affect them personally and professionally, what lifestyle changes may accompany the recovery period, and the expenses involved. They also need to have a stable weight for six months to one year. All surgeries, including cosmetic procedures, carry risk. Those with a history of cardiovascular disease, lung disease, diabetes or obesity have a higher risk of developing complications such as pneumonia, stroke, heart attack or blood clots in the legs or lungs. Smoking also increases risks and interferes with healing.

43. It can be clearly understood from the passage that - - - - .

- A) a cosmetic surgery aims to enhance a person's image

- C) cosmetic surgeons must consider the patients' motives for an operation
- D) patients who undergo a cosmetic surgery shouldn't expect dramatic changes
- E) after a cosmetic surgery patients can generally be unsatisfied with the results

44. It can be inferred from the passage that - - - - .

- A) patients shouldn't desire long-term outcomes after a cosmetic surgery
- B) one cannot have a cosmetic surgery anywhere on the face and the body
- C) a cosmetic surgery can affect a patient not only physically but also psychologically
- D) the vast majority of patients have reasonable expectations for a successful surgery
- E) good candidates may choose to lose some weight six months before the operation

45. It's clear in the passage that - - - - .

- A) during the recovery period patients may meet some additional expenses
- B) an obese doesn't develop any medical complications after a cosmetic surgery
- C) a cosmetic surgery carries more risk than any other surgeries for those who smoke
- D) a heart attack is one of the possible outcomes of a cosmetic surgery for a diabetic
- E) patients have a higher risk of developing cardiovascular disease during the surgery

A smartphone is a mobile phone (also known as cell phones or mobiles) with an advanced mobile operating system that combines features of a personal computer operating system with other features useful for mobile or handheld use. Smartphones typically combine the features of a mobile phone, such as the abilities to place and receive voice calls and create and receive text messages, with those of other popular digital mobile devices like personal digital assistants, such as an event calendar, media player, video games, GPS navigation and digital camera. Smartphones can access the Internet and can run a variety of third-party software components. The display of a smartphone is almost always a touchscreen and sometimes additionally a touch-enabled keyboard, which enables the user to use a virtual keyboard to type words and numbers and press onscreen icons to activate "app" features. In 1999, a Japanese firm released the first smartphones to achieve mass adoption within a country. Smartphones became widespread in the late 2000s. In the third quarter of 2012, one billion smartphones were in use worldwide. Global smartphone sales surpassed the sales figures for regular cell phones in early 2013.

Amazingly, the historical development of tennis dates back several thousands of years. The game was developed from a 12th century French handball game called "Paume" (palm) in which a ball was struck with the hand. After some time "Paume" evolved into real tennis and the players started using racquets. The game was first created by European monks for entertainment roles during ceremonial occasions. At first, the ball was hit with hands. Later, the leather glove came into existence. This leather glove was replaced with an adaptive handle for effective hitting and serving of the ball. That was a birth of tennis racquet. Tennis balls also underwent frequent modifications. First tennis ball was from wood. Then it was filled with cellulose material to give way to a bouncier. The game became very popular when it was adopted by a royal family in France in the 13th century. Louis X of France was a keen player of the game and became notable as the first person to construct indoor tennis courts in the modern style. Louis was unhappy with playing tennis outdoors and accordingly had indoor courts made in Paris around the end of the 13th century. In due course this design spread across royal palaces all over Europe. In June 1316 at Vincennes, following a particularly exhausting game, Louis drank a large quantity of cooled wine and subsequently died of either pneumonia or pleurisy, although there was also suspicion of poisoning.

49. We can understand from the passage - - - .

- A) tennis balls are still made of wood
- B) first tennis players used only their bare hands
- C) Louis X of France was the inventor of tennis
- D) first tennis players in the history were all royals
- E) leather gloves took the place of racquets in time

50. We can conclude from the passage that - - - .

- A) King Louis preferred indoor tennis
- B) tennis was invented with the death of King Louis
- C) tennis was played only in palaces throughout the history
- D) the only way to have fun in ceremonies was playing tennis
- E) the game became popular among monks in the 13th century

51. We can infer from the passage that - - - .

- A) the death of King Louis is a mystery
- B) tennis was first started playing indoors
- C) outdoor tennis was popular among royal palaces
- D) the first modern tennis court was built at Vincennes
- E) there were only outdoor courts in Paris in the 13th century

A coffee seed, commonly called coffee bean, is a seed of the coffee plant, and is the source for coffee. It is the pit inside the red or purple fruit often referred to as a cherry. Even though the coffee beans are seeds, they are referred to as "beans" because of their resemblance to true beans. A small percentage of cherries contain a single seed, instead of the usual two. This is called a "pea berry". The pea berry occurs only between 10 and 15% of the time, and it is a fairly common (yet scientifically unproven) belief that they have more flavour than normal coffee beans. The two most economically important varieties of coffee plant are the Arabica and the Robusta; 75–80% of the coffee produced worldwide is Arabica and 20% is Robusta. Arabica beans consist of 0.8–1.4% caffeine and Robusta beans consist of 1.7–4% caffeine. As coffee is one of the world's most widely consumed beverages, coffee beans are a major cash crop and an important export product. The United States imports more coffee than any other nation and the value of coffee imported exceeded $8 billion. As of 2015, Americans consumed approximately 400 million cups of coffee per day, making the United States the leading consumer of coffee in the world.

52. It can be understood from the passage that the seeds of the coffee plant are referred to "beans" as - - - - .

- A) they are source for coffee
- B) they look like true beans
- C) they consist of two stones
- D) they are so-called stone fruits
- E) the pit inside it is called cherry

53. It can be inferred from the passage that - - - - .

- A) coffee cherries always contain a single seed
- B) pea berries are tastier than normal coffee beans
- C) most of the coffee produced worldwide is Robusta
- D) Arabica beans contain more caffeine than Robusta beans
- E) coffee beans aren't considered as an important export product

54. It's clear in the passage that - - - - .

- A) there isn't any country in the world which consumes more coffee than the USA
- B) coffee has no importance for the USA in terms of economic growth
- C) the value of the coffee the USA exported is more than $8 billion
- D) coffeehouses in the USA sell 400 cups of coffee every day
